About the Workshop

As family farms continue to become larger and more complex, farm transitions also increase in complexity. The complexity and value of the farm, along with family dynamics is a challenge to navigate for a lot of farm families. Added to this is the fact that it only happens once in a generation.

In this presentation, Glen will talk about some of the challenges, as well as opportunities and provide insights into how to develop a strong transition plan. What are the components of a good farm plan? Who should be on the farm transition team? Is it ever too early to start building a plan? These and other questions will be discussed as part of this presentation.

About our presenter

Glen works with Farm Credit Canada as a Business Advisor. In this role, he works with family farms and agricultural businesses across BC as well as other parts of Canada. The focus of this role is to help families get started on building a transition plan as they move from one generation the next.

Glen grew up on a farm in Manitoba and has spent more than 30 years working in the agriculture industry throughout Canada. He has held leadership positions in agricultural businesses for more than 30 years. He has led several different types of businesses ranging from agronomy and retail to wholesale distribution and the feed industry. Prior to returning to FCC in the capacity of Business Advisor, Glen spent several years leading a tech/software business in the agriculture industry. This broad experience helps Glen in his current role of helping families successfully build their transition plans.
