About the Workshop

Two years after the initial COVID-19 discovery, global agriculture markets remain volatile and uncertain. The dual impact of the virus as well as government stimulus created tight supplies and surging demand. The subsequent commodity “super-cycle” remains in place as we begin 2022 with elevated feed and meat prices globally. This year’s global crops now face soaring fertilizer costs. China remains the key global market driver for most commodities. In this presentation I’ll be discussing these issues and others with a focus on key feed grains.

About our presenter

Brett Stuart is the President of Global AgriTrends. The firm was organized in 2006 and provides global market research, analysis and forecasting to a variety of clients around the world. He was formerly the lead economist for the U.S. Meat Export Federation. He has conducted numerous research and analysis projects in the global meat trade area as well as advising government representatives on international protein trade issues. Mr. Stuart has conducted on-the-ground agriculture industry research for a variety of clients on six continents.

Brett was raised on a cattle ranch operating in Utah and Wyoming and has previously worked as a controller in the agriculture industry.

He received an undergraduate degree in accounting at Utah State University and a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Nebraska.

He and his wife Amanda live with their 5 kids on a farm near Preston, Idaho.
